MOLLY MAYBE'S MONSTERS

by Kristina Stephenson

SIMON AND SCHUSTER London New York Sydney Toronto New Delhi This is Smallsbury. It's a sleepy little town where nothing much ever happens.

At least that's how it might seem.

In this snoringly, boringly ordinary place, Molly Maybe was up in her tree house with her dog by her side.

Next door, Molly's neighbour, Mr Bottomly Brown, was digging a pond in his garden when he suddenly found something rather peculiar.

'Look at that, Waggy Burns,' said Molly. 'Whatever could it be?' Then, three days later, Molly and Waggy heard a terrible roar.

It was Mr Bottomly Brown, shouting.

'Look at my perfect lawn! Pesky moles have been digging holes.'

Molly shook her head. 'Moles?' she said. 'I don't think so.' And that's when she spotted ...

the claw.

'I knew it,' said Molly. 'There are monsters at work and we need to find out why. Time to go underground, Waggy Burns!'

Then they opened a door in the tree house floor.

Waggy wiggled his wiry whiskers and waggled off to fetch his special Walkie-Talkie Collar.

You see, Molly's tree house was no ORDINARY tree house. Inside it was the best-kept secret in Smallsbury. It led to a magical monster world and Molly's marvellous Mundervator was the only way to get there. H

'Woof, woof, woof!' said Waggy. 'Oops,' said Molly. 'I nearly forgot!' And she turned on Waggy's collar.

BY ORDER OF THE COUNCIL AT NOON ALL MONSTERS IN UNDERMUNDER MUST GATHER IN THE SQUARE

'Then that's where we'll find our lawn-destroying monster,' said Molly with a grin.
