In the dark depths of winter, far far away,
snow started falling at the cold break of day.

"A perilous journey will need to be done.
Our bravest and best must go to the Sun.
Without the Sun's warmth we'll have nothing to eat.
So – which one of you will ask for some heat?"

Up through the storm brave Crow quickly flew,
though the snow blurred his vision and the wind –
how it blew!
Closer and closer he came to the Sun,
but his troubles and trials had only begun.

Crow flew through the blizzard, then to his delight
he entered Sun's kingdom of dazzling bright light.
