As the wind whistled and the trees shook, the bells got louder.

Jingle, jingle, jingle.

Ollie was getting close.

She took a deep breath and, feeling very brave, she ran into the darkness.

Crunch, crunch, crunch.

A reindeer stepped through the crisp snow towards Ollie.

"H . . . h . . . hello," she whispered,
not quite believing her eyes.
"Are you looking for this?"

The reindeer knelt down patiently while Ollie fastened his collar.
Then he lowered himself even further.

Ollie knew exactly what to do and clambered onto his back.
She wondered if they would go for a ride through the forest,
but to her surprise . . .

They travelled over snow-covered lands and seas glittering in the moonlight. As they journeyed on, Ollie shivered, and the reindeer knew there was one last place he should take her.
