The Classroom

This is Huckle's classroom. And behind the desk sits Miss Honey, his teacher. Every morning the pupils say, "Good morning, Miss Honey." And every morning, she says, "Good morning, children. My, don't you look bright and fresh this morning!" She always says that.

Down by the Busy Sea

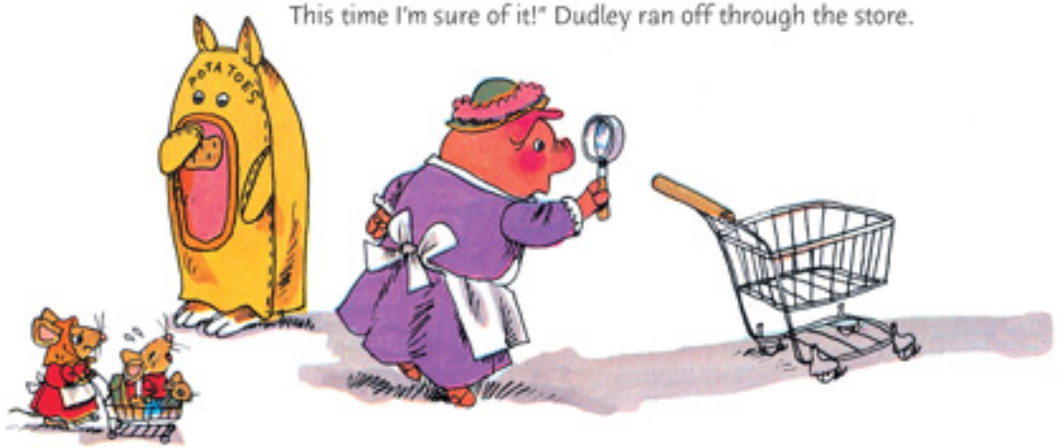

Huckle and Lowly are visiting Captain Salty down at the pier.
The captain shows them all the things there are to see at a harbour.
"This is a passenger ship," he explains. "It will carry people across the ocean to visit their friends in distant places."
Lowly thinks he would like to be a sea captain when he grows up.

Dudley was sorry that he had ruined the lady's hat.
To show everyone that he was really a nice lady,
he helped Mother Bunny pick out a watermelon that she couldn't reach.
"Now please try to catch this one," said Dudley.
Meanwhile Sam Potatoes was keeping his eyes and ears open.

"Dudley," said Sam. "Did you notice? That doll is getting fat."
Dudley was not paying much attention to what Sam was saying.
"Sam look!" he shouted. "There's the robber!
This time I'm sure of it!" Dudley ran off through the store.

A lady shopper wished to buy a sack of potatoes.
Sam Potatoes escaped from her just in time.
"That lady crocodile is the robber!" said Dudley.
"She is hiding stolen food
in her baby carriage."

Dudley smashed into the baby carriage,
but there was no stolen food inside it.
Mother Crocodile was furious!
"Just when I finally get my darling little babies to sleep, you have to come along and wake them up!" she said.
"Dudley! Dudley! I could have told you she wasn't the robber" said Sam Potatoes.
"I know who is doing the stealing!"
