In the neighboring bay there lives a sleeping whale. Is he always asleep? Yes … and he will never wake up until all the city's inhabitants fall into a deep sleep on his back at the same time. Don't worry, however, because this will never happen. No city is ever completely asleep!

And so, the good whale snores peacefully in his shelter. Protected from the waves, he doesn't even notice that each of his loud snores spews heaps of fish that are washed up on the shore.

Atchoo! Every time someone sneezes, the animals change their coats. If at first they were silky soft with black and white stripes, they later become wiry and flowery the next time you sneeze. Who knows? You cannot remember what they looked like because as soon as you sneeze ...
