ULURU

You're in the middle of a desert, and the ground is red and dry—it's hard to imagine that anything lives here. But Uluru-Kata Tjuta National Park is teeming with life: snakes, lizards, birds, and unique Australian mammals, like the bilby and the golden bandicoot. The giant red rock known as Uluru doesn't seem so big as you drive toward it. But you drive for a while and it doesn't appear to be any closer...it's big, and it's still a long way away!

Uluru is a sandstone rock formation, formed 500 million years ago. As you walk around the base of it, you'll see caves and rock paintings that might be 5,000 years old. The indigenous Pitjantjatjara people have lived in the area for at least 30,000 years, and Uluru is a place of spiritual significance for them.

THE RED COLOR of the rock comes from rust—the sandstone contains iron minerals that have rusted its naturally gray surface.

The wedge-tailed eagle is the largest bird of prey in Australia—you often see them in pairs.

Kata Tjuta's collection of rocks are about 25 miles from Uluru—and the TALLEST is three times as high!

Uluru was once known as AYERS ROCK—a name it was given by the first Europeans to see it.

ULURU is about 1,100 feet high—taller than the Eiffel Tower!

You aren't allowed to CLIMB Uluru, partly because it's quite dangerous, but also out of respect for indigenous Australians who consider it a sacred place.

The PITJANTJATJARA people hold ceremonies around Uluru, dancing and telling Dreamtime stories.

Many of the mammals in the park are threatened or endangered, like the BILBY and the GOLDEN BANDICOOT.

Rock paintings can be found at Uluru. The paintings can be thousands of years old and show the long relationship the local people have with the land.

Take a trip around the park in a RUGGED 4WD TRUCK. The roads are soft and sandy, so don't get stuck!

EUROPE

Europe is one of the most wondrous places on Earth. For thousands of years, humans have been changing the landscape, farming, and...building things! Europe has many world wonders, most of them made by people. Castles, churches, and prehistoric monuments are waiting for you there. And the eternal lights of the aurora borealis are a beautiful place to start. #
