Pablo the Artist

SATOSHI KITAMURA

ANDERSEN PRESS
LONDON

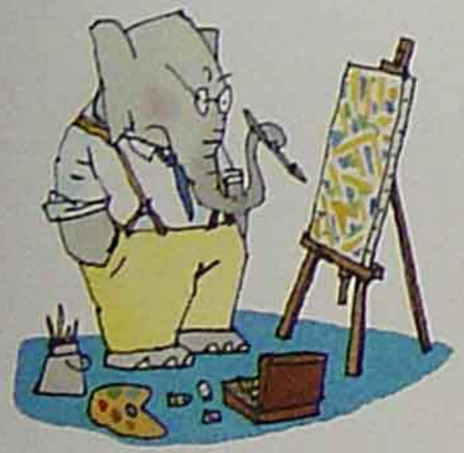

The members of Hoof Lane Art Club were excited. There was to be an exhibition of their work and everyone was busily painting – except for Pablo. It was his dream to have a picture in an exhibition, but now he stood in front of an empty canvas, arms folded, looking troubled.

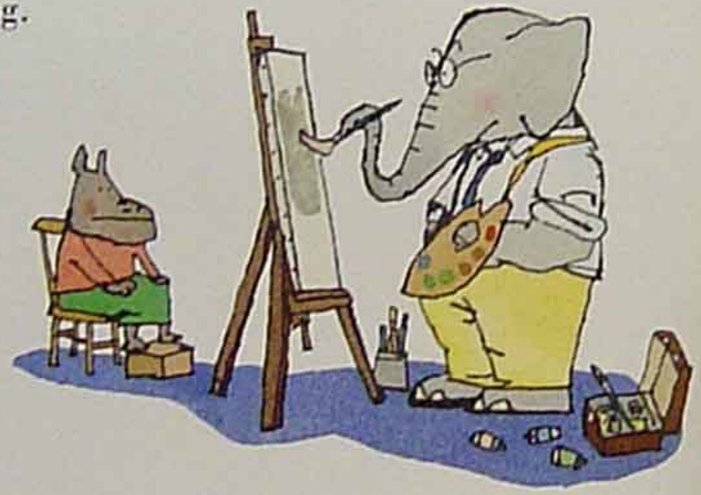

He had painted flowers in a vase,

a portrait of his friend,

and even an abstract painting.

Yet, nothing looked right!
"I think I have artist's block!"
sighed Pablo.

"Why don't you go out and paint a landscape or something for a change?" suggested Miss Hippo during the tea break.
"Good idea!" agreed Leonardo the Lion. "In my view, a good landscape is the next best thing to a self-portrait."
Leonardo was very good at painting himself.
"Perhaps you're right," said Pablo. "I'll give it a try."
