Mr Zooty was out and about on the lookout. He looked out for people to help out. "Get out, help out," was his motto, and he liked it.

He was watching Lucy and Sam Taylor who were trying to catch leaves for luck. They'd been trying for ages.

"How many have we got?"
asked Sam.

"Only three," said Lucy.
"But three is better than nothing."

Mr Zooty
watched them giving
the leaves to their mother.
"Well done!" she said.
"We could do with some luck."

"I thought so," said Mr Zooty.
He looked in his little red case.
"Aha!" he said. "Now, let's see..."
