

Two of the Spanish captains still didn't believe Magellan. The stars in the sky didn't seem to match up with their maps. Rumours spread that Magellan had a secret plan to return to Portugal, taking all the Spanish goods with him. The day after arriving in the bay, the two captains decided to seize control and head back home to Spain.

As Magellan enjoyed an Easter meal aboard the Trinidad, two rowing boats silently paddled up to the San Antonio. Armed sailors boarded the ship and arrested all the Portuguese crew, murdering the ship's master. The Concepción and the Victoria were both seized in the same way, meaning three ships were now completely under Spanish control.
