I am SUPER MILLY!

Today is Superhero Day at school.

I have used all the tinfoil,
a tea towel with only one hole
– which doesn't even show –
a pair of my brother Joe's pants
and a big badge with an M.

But . . .

... I don't have
X-ray vision ...

I can't climb
up buildings ...

and superheroes are supposed to beat the baddies ...

but I can't stop Joe taking
the last bit of toast.

I don't have any special powers.

When I get into class, there is already a big emergency.

William's dad has forgotten that it is Superhero Day. William is crying in the book corner . . . in his normal trousers!

A real superhero would spin around William super fast . . .

until his outfit changed.

But Miss Kent says, "Bottoms on seats please, Milly," so . . .

I think hard and . . .
