EGMONT

Once up on Furry Tail Hill, in a field between a babbling blue stream and a deep, dark forest, lived a rabbit called Rabunzel.

She had a teeny tufty tail, a tiny twitchy nose and two wide eyes.

She also had VERY long ears.

So long that they trailed behind her everywhere she went.

This made Rabunzel's mother worry.
Like all the animals on Furry Tail Hill, she lived in fear of the hungry-eyed creatures that lurked in the deep, dark forest.

With Rabunzel's long ears causing her so much danger, her mother decided she had to put her daughter somewhere safe, far away from the hungry-eyed creatures.

"We must keep you up high,
You'll be safe in the sky.
Out of harm's way,
That's where you must stay."

There was no way up
and no way down.
Finally, Rabunzel
was safe and sound.
And all alone.
