As the moon and the lighthouse guide ships safely back, rows of street-lights appear while the sky fades to black.
In a house, there's a candle to brighten the nights, with a wish to be bold, looking out at the lights.
There's a wonderful show for this flame, Little Glow, as the seasons bring glimmering, magical sights.

When a new year brings fortune to house number eight, rows of lanterns glow red marking this special date.
As the curve of the moon, although slim, lights the sky, there's a dragon with fiery breath rising high.
Darting up, sinking low, the dance thrills Little Glow, who watches the firecrackers fizzle and fly.

When the newest of moons forms a bright silver arc, at house number six there's a meal after dark.
Lanterns are hung from the trees so they sway, casting rainbows of colour as prayers drift away.
And they'll watch the moon grow (which inspires Little Glow) before coming to eat at the end of each day.
