

Elmer is taking the young elephants to pick a Christmas tree. Moose tells Elmer, "Let them see Papa Red tonight but keep them hidden. We have a busy night ahead."

A vibrant illustration from a children's book. On the left, a large elephant is covered in a colorful patchwork of squares in red, yellow, blue, green, pink, and black. It is reaching its trunk towards a large, brown tree trunk that is being carried by a herd of grey elephants. The herd consists of six elephants of varying sizes, all walking down a brown, sloping hill. They are carrying a large, bushy green tree on their backs. The background is a deep purple, and several small blue birds are flying in the sky. The text is located in the bottom left corner, within the brown hill area.

They choose a tree and carefully carry it down the mountain. "Have you ever seen Papa Red, Elmer?" ask the youngsters. "Yes," says Elmer. "You might see him tonight if you promise to hide."
