You're in my spot.

That's where I curl up, sometimes.

Now you're in my other spot.

Now you're in my third spot.

I think that cat might be my greatest enemy in the entire house.

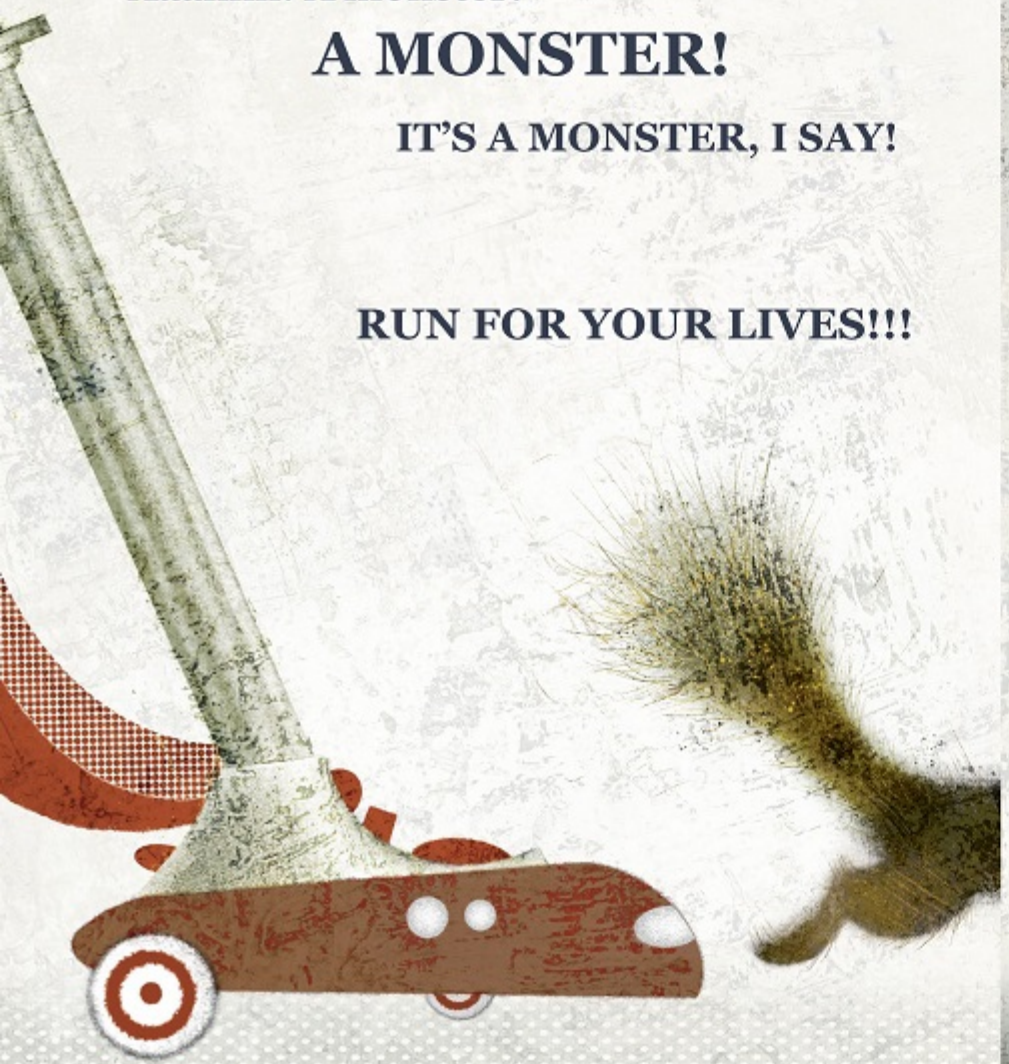

Aaahhh! A monster!

A MONSTER!

IT'S A MONSTER, I SAY!

RUN FOR YOUR LIVES!!!

I told you
I heard something.

STAY AWAY,
MONSTER!

YOU DO NOT WANT TO MESS WITH THESE CLAWS!

YOU DO NOT WANT TO BEAR THE BRUNT OF THESE TEETH!

OH NO, YOU DON'T!

You! Cat! Hello!

I confess that I have watched you mope
around outside, hiding nuts that I'll never again locate, which I'm saving for some reason. A button.
Now listen to me, Cat: Somebody feeds you.
Somebody gives you water.
you warm and even hands you treats.
Things are difficult out here, Cat.
This tree, although it's shared with roommates.
Sure, you may be housebound, and you may current living situation, but look at me, Kitty.
OUTSIDE? Honestly, what I
a touch of boredom from time to time. Yes, paw to trade places with you for a day.
And start embracing the life you have.
will fall into place after that.

Think about it . . .

I spy you through this window.
around your house for months.
Somebody changes your litter box.
Somebody brushes you and keeps Treats, I say! Meanwhile, I scurry evading predators that only seem to multiply.
I don't have much. My branch, of course.
A few nuts I've kept. A piece of ribbon,
And that's about it.
find reasons to gripe about your
You think it's so great wouldn't give for just
I would give my right
So quit saying, "Poor me."
Everything else

