ga Robo HEROES?

// Celebrity

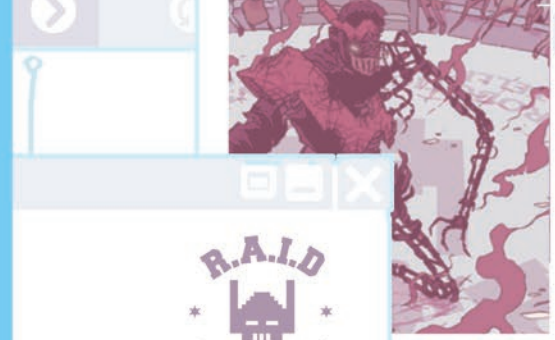

by Larissa Hench, staff writer

BROTHERS. ROBOTS. SUPERHEROES. Whether they're attending their ordinary East London school or saving the city from evil robot attackers, there's one thing for sure: there's no one quite like Alex and Freddy Sharma, the world's only sentient robots.

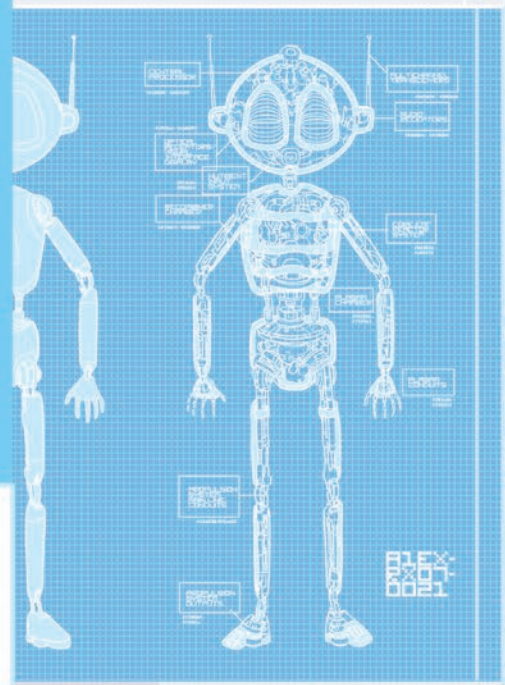

"I don't know if I'm technically a superhero," says Freddy, mulling the question during a brief appearance at one of R.A.I.D.'s rare press conferences. "I mean, I haven't got a cape."

Perhaps not, but what he does have is one of the most advanced artificial brains on the planet, and a Kerchatov Reactor - one of only three known to be in existence -

ATTACK ON LONDON

News // UK // Breaking

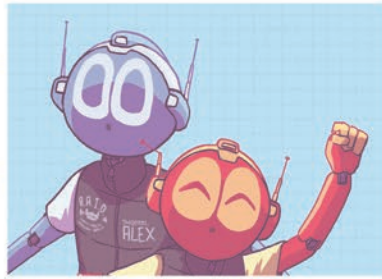

by Sufjan Davis, staff reporter

Large areas of central and east London were cordoned off by emergency services last night following an apparent attack on the docklands headquarters of R.A.I.D. – Robotics Analysis, Intelligence and Defence.

While there has yet to be an official comment from R.A.I.D. and details of the incident are still emerging, several eye-witnesses reportedly identified the attacker as WOLFRAM, the long-thought-destroyed renegade robot and onetime member of the SUPER ROBO 7.

An unnamed source inside the organisation indicated that the outcome could have been far worse if not for the intervention of Alex and Freddy Sharma (right).
The Sharmas, popularly known as the 'Mega Robo Bros', are brothers, schoolchildren, and the world's only known sentient robots. They are also the youngest authorised agents of R.A.I.D.
