For Talitha who likes lazy monsters.

It was nighttime.
The house, and everyone
in it, was fast asleep.

A monster under his bed was making too much noise.

Apart from Alexander who was wide awake.

to the monster who was reading a book about dinosaurs.

"Shh," whispered Alexander

"You'll wake Mummy and then she might make us eat broccoli."

Alexander

"Oh," said the monster, "isn't your Mummy scared of monsters?"

"I'm not afraid of monsters," thought Alexander bravely, and he immediately decided to make a list of who was and who wasn't afraid of monsters.

The following day, Mummy received a postcard from her sister who was exploring yet another faraway place.

"Monsters don't scare your Aunt," chuckled Mummy.

This time, her sister was somewhere in the middle of Scotland.

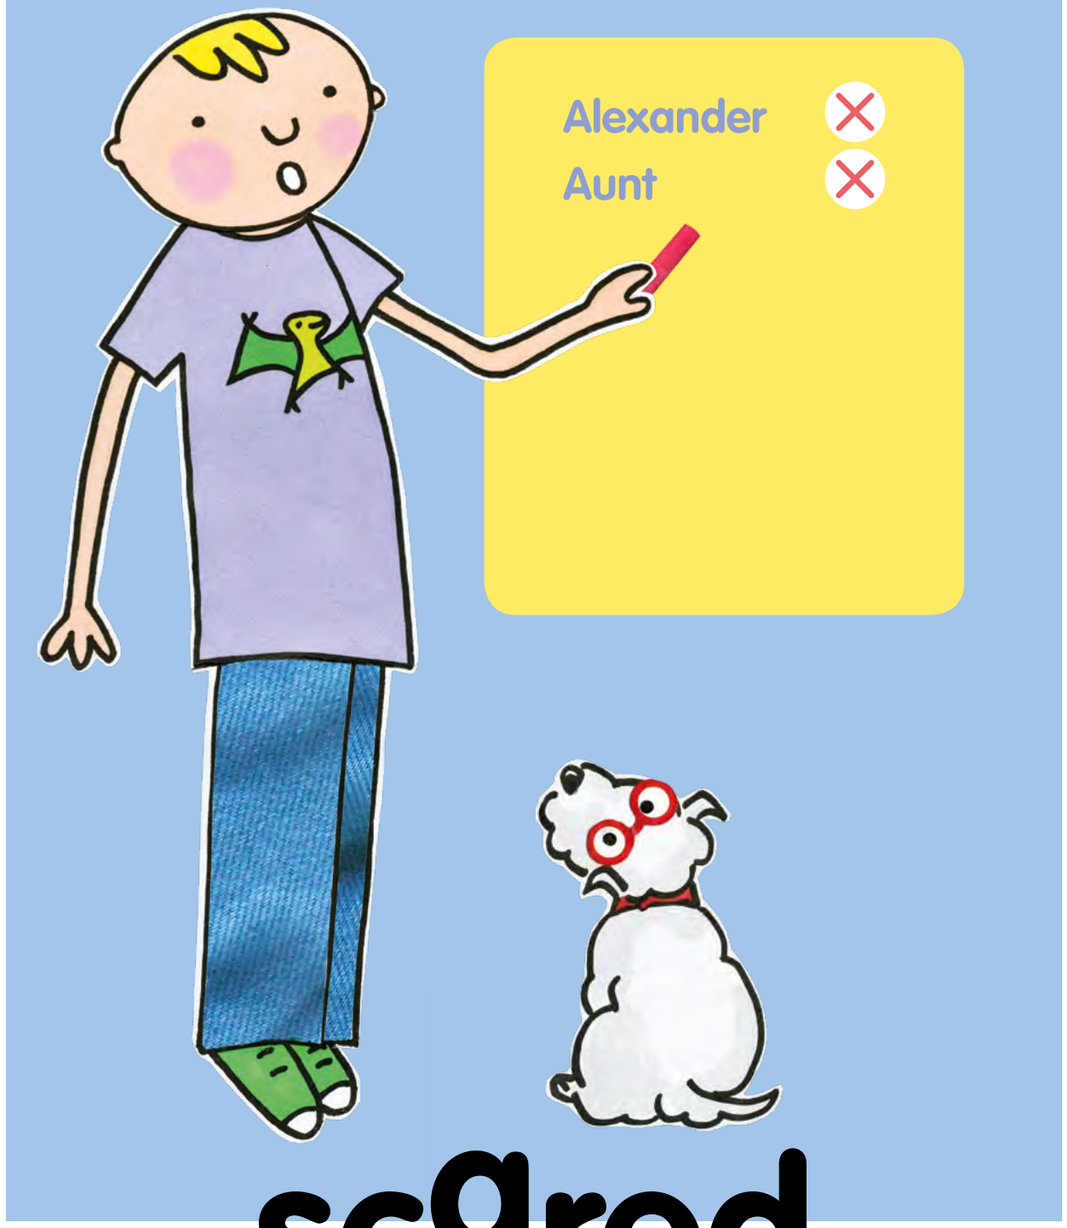

"My Aunt is never scared of monsters," smiled Alexander, putting a firm cross next to his Aunt's name.
