Luna Loves Gardening

ANDERSEN PRESS

Dad loves gardening.
"It's like digging up a world of stories," says Dad.
"How?" asks Luna.
"You'll see," says Dad.

Wellies for jumping – check.
Watering can for watering – check.
Special seeds for planting – check.

Dad and Luna cycle to the community garden.

Grandpa and Nana are waiting, knee-deep in mud.

Luna jumps right in.

Squelch!

As Luna looks at the plants, stories start to bloom . . .

"Potatoes come all the way from South America. They were grown by the Incas," says Grandpa.

"And the swallows and swifts in the sky have just swooped in from Africa," says Nana.

Luna snuggles the potatoes deep, imagining Incan gardens and flights over the Sahara Desert.
