ONCE UPON A BED... in a royal palace, there lived a little princess called Amma.

Princess Amma had an imagination
as big and as wild as her Afro.

EVERY DAY she was ready to battle knights with the queen . . .

look for mermaids with the king . . .

and even hunt for dragons
with Grandma Grace.

But every bedtime,
Princess Amma's big imagination meant
WORRIES.

Her blankets felt HEAVY,
and the shadows on the walls
looked DARK and scary.
And the worries were all because . . .

Princess Amma WETS THE BED.

EVERY MORNING, there was lots to do to sort out the tricky business of the princess and the pee.

The lord of the laundry,

the lady of the linens

and the manager of the mattresses RUSHED and FUSSED all over the palace, swapping soggy sheets for lovely new scented bedding.

THE QUEEN tried her best to help.
'Maybe you should sleep closer to the loo?' she said.

But Amma was not at all sure that a bath
would make a very good bed!

THE KING gave Amma
a sparkly reward chart.

But Amma worried if she would ever have enough dry nights to fill the chart with stickers.
