LONDON

One stormy night, Toby was in his bed listening to the wind.

It roared round the house, tearing at the windows and rattling the doors. It howled so loud that Toby couldn't sleep.

He lay there as the thunder crashed and the rain pattered on the glass.

Suddenly, he felt the whole house rising and falling. It was rolling . . .

. . . like a ship in the middle of the ocean.

Captain Toby and his crew were busy finding their way on the ship's chart.

A brilliant flash of lightning lit up the sky.
'There'll be a heavy sea tonight,' said Captain Toby.
