DOGDUNNIT

PETER BENTLY TOR FREEMAN

Andersen Press

Inspector Keyhole wore a frown.
A night of crime had swept the town.

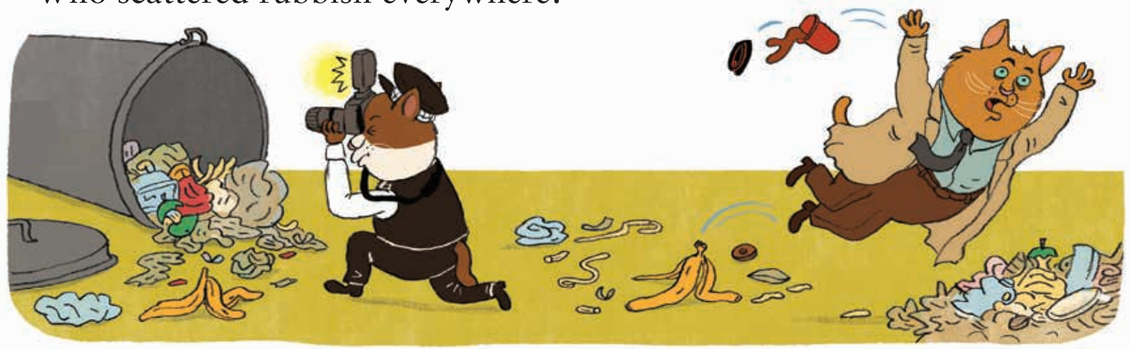

Who chewed the rug?

Who trashed the chair?

Who scattered rubbish everywhere?

Tore Katie's favourite jeans to shreds?

Left muddy paw prints on the beds?

Who blocked the loo with Grandad's slippers?

Who scoffed the sausages and kippers?

Who sent a vase of flowers flying – just where Mummy's phone was lying?

And who did a doo-doo,
small and neat,
that Daddy stood on –
in bare feet?

The great detective Purrlock Jones
Said, "I feel it in my bones.
It's MOGGIARTY's work, it's plain.
The King of Crime has struck again!"

IT'S A STITCH UP

Inspector Keyhole shook his head.
"It's DOGS what's done these crimes," he said.
"It wasn't us!" the dogs protested –

But Keyhole had them all arrested.

IT'S A STITCH UP

Purrlock watched and made a vow:
"I'll prove that Keyhole's wrong – but how?
Aha!" she said. "What's this I've found?
A mouse's paw prints on the ground!"
