Chancay's Fire Quest

Retold by Abigail Steel

Illustrated by Alejandra Barajas

RISING STARS

Long ago, in the Incan lands of Peru, there lived a man called Chancay.

One fine June morning, Chancay set off to go fishing.

In a misty woodland, Chancay came to a pool of sparkling water.

He dropped his net deep into the water and felt a strong tug.

Chancay pulled with all his might until his net appeared.

He was shocked to see such a fine fish inside it!

“You are too fine to be eaten,” said Chancay.
“I am hungry, but I will let you go.”

So Chancay let the fish escape.

