Once there was a boy from east London called David.
He wanted to be a footballer – but not just for any team.
Like his parents, he was a Manchester United fan and dreamt of scoring goals on their pitch.

The hours practising alone in the garden paid off when David joined Ridgeway Rovers. For the first time, he was part of something bigger than himself: a team. Together they won ninety-two games in a row!

Later, David got the chance to be a Manchester United mascot!

Standing in the middle of the stadium, side by side with the team, he knew this was where he belonged.

Over the next few seasons, David continued to train hard. When Manchester United saw how well he played for his local club, they offered him a place in their youth team. It became a winning squad known as the Class of '92.
