Pedro liked everything to be ... just right. Spot on. Perfect.

His toys were always put away
perfectly in the Proper Place ...

Pedro spelled his name
perfectly (every time) ...

no one could ding a triangle as perfectly as Pedro ...

and Pedro prided himself on his perfect roly-polies.

But there was something missing from Pedro's otherwise perfect life.

He'd not yet met the perfect friend. Of course, Pedro had friends that he liked.

But they were often too messy . . .

LOUD . . .

or too . . . Pedro-didn't-know-what.

But he knew they weren't perfect.

And with the school talent show coming up, Pedro needed to find an absolutely perfect partner to perform with.

So, when Poppy introduced herself to Pedro
one playtime, the timing seemed perfect.

And Poppy seemed perfect too!

Such perfectly tied shoelaces!

Such perfect putting-away
of toys—in the Proper Place!

Perfection!

Poppy's roly-poly?
