Tomorrow I'm in Charge!

Translated by Melody Shaw

GECKO PRESS

When Weasel got home,
he found Bear busy playing.
With Badger!

"We're in the middle of a game," said Bear.
"Would you like to make us something to eat?"

Weasel didn't think much of that idea.
"Badger is my friend!" he said.
"You can't just play with him!"

"Badger doesn't belong to you.
You can play with him tomorrow."

Badger said maybe they could all just—

"Great idea," said Weasel. "Let's play house!
I'll be the mother, Badger can be the father,
and you can be the child!"

"I always have to be the child," grumbled Bear.

"You're the child," insisted Weasel,
"and it's time for bed!"

Bear protested: "But I'm not tired!"

"You have to go to bed! You've been naughty!
We grown-ups have work to do.
With our fire engines."

"Okay then, I'm the child.
And now the child is angry.
And very naughty. I'm going to make a huge mess."

"You're playing the game wrong!"

"And you grown-ups
have to tidy everything up.
All by yourselves!"
