The Tiger Child

Michelle Beech

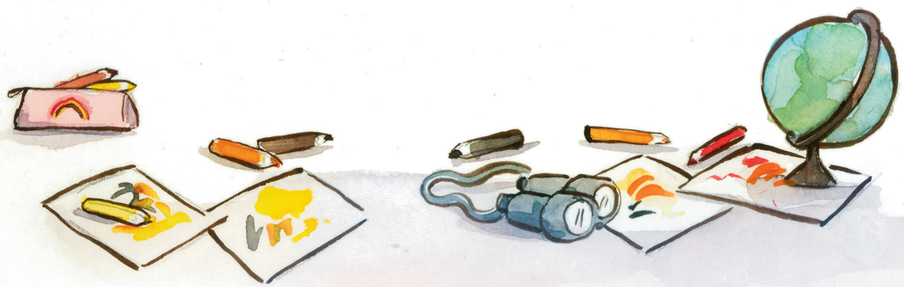

post wave

Sometimes I feel too quiet.
Too small. Too afraid.

But sometimes I dream . . .
I hear the call of the wild.

SNAP!

What was that?
Maybe if I don't look, it will go away.

But adventure is knocking.
I can't hide forever.

A whisper is calling me forward . . .

"Come, child, into the wild."

I push open the door,

The garden looks different somehow.
The air feels alive.

Footprints! One after the other.
They lead to the trees.

To the wild part where I never go.
This time, I follow.

The Tiger Child

Sometimes, bravery is a whisper, not a roar.

When a shy little girl spots a flash of orange in the trees, she dares to follow it. The deeper she ventures, the wilder she grows, until she comes face to face with a mysterious tiger . . .

With peek-through pages and a pop-up surprise, this magical tale will inspire children to find confidence in their own voice.
