FRED THE DEER

(very demanding)

Pépé Smit

Scallywag Press Ltd
LONDON

Fred is a deer.
This is what he looks like.

What?
That is far too SMALL!

Oh! Like this, then?

Absolutely not!
It's far too BIG!

Umm . . .
what about this?

Yuck!
I'm not
that cute...

Look, this is me!

And this

and this

and this

and this!

Okay. So that is Fred.

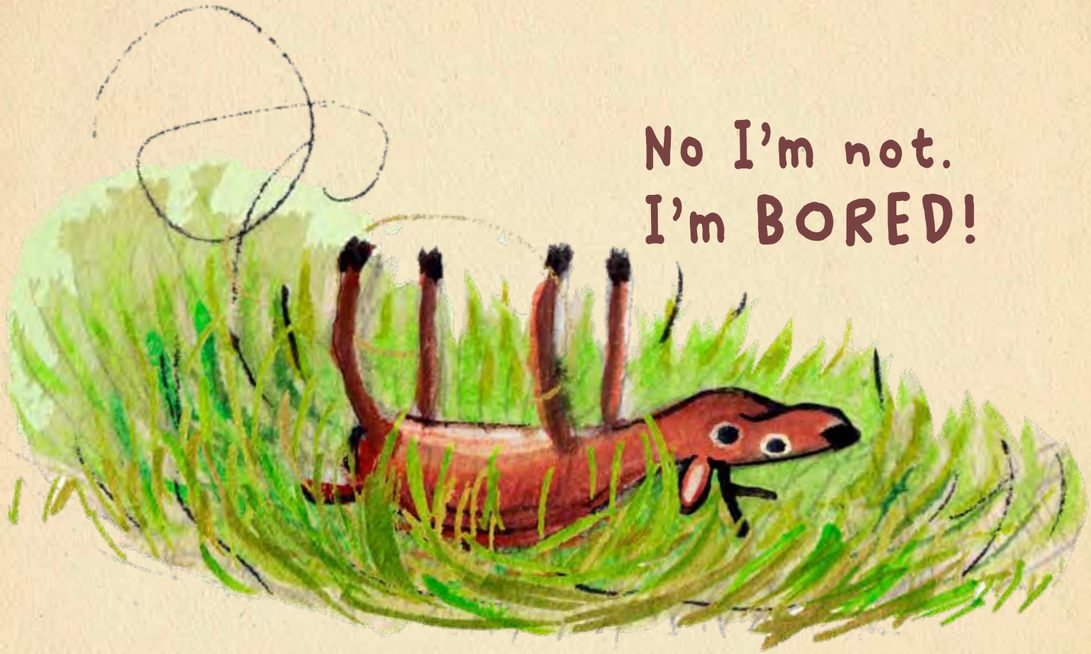

Fred lives in a big forest. He plays hide-and-seek between the trees.

He eats grass and, every now and then, a leaf or two.

He rolls around in the grass and he is very happy.

What's that all about, a deer feeling bored?

Fred trots to the edge of the forest and – HOOPLA – out he jumps.

Fred? Where are you going?

Hmmm, Fred is going to the city. Is that such a good idea?

As Fred strolls down the street,
he notices that everyone is looking at him strangely.

He decides to walk on his hindlegs.
Maybe that way he'll be less noticeable.

But no! People still stare.
