It was a busy Easter Friday at City Hospital. Doctor Glenda was writing something important on a piece of paper.

Nurse Percy was looking after someone called Jack, who had tried to mend a cut on his head with vinegar and brown paper.

Suddenly the phone rang.

Doctor Glenda picked it up.

'Urgency Emergency!'

It was Frank, one of the Pengamedics.

'We need a doctor and nurse here right away! Mrs Rabbit was on her way to the hospital to have her bunnies, but she has been run over by a little bear on a bike. The little bear is trapped under the bike and Mrs Rabbit's foot is trapped in the wheel!'

‘Nurse Percy!’ said Doctor Glenda, grabbing her bag. ‘Let’s go!’

At the roadside the Pengamedics were looking after Mrs Rabbit and Little Bear. A hedgehog was sitting on the pavement.

'The fire and rescue service is on its way,' said Frank.

Doctor Glenda used a special ear trumpet so she could listen to the bunnies in Mrs Rabbit's tummy.

'As far as I can tell, the bunnies are OK,' said Doctor Glenda.
