Pull up the quilt, turn out the light,
dear child, it's time to say goodnight.
In darkness black and soft and deep I'll watch beside you while you sleep.

I'd wrap you safely in my wings
and tell you tales of sleepy things

I'd hold you tight and close and warm and keep you safe all through the storm.

From North to South and East to West from cave to berg and twig to nest
a sleepy hush across the world,
small creatures in their beds are curled.
