CRUNCH MUNCH DINOSAUR LUNCH!

Paul Bright Mike Terry

LITTLE TIGER PRESS
London

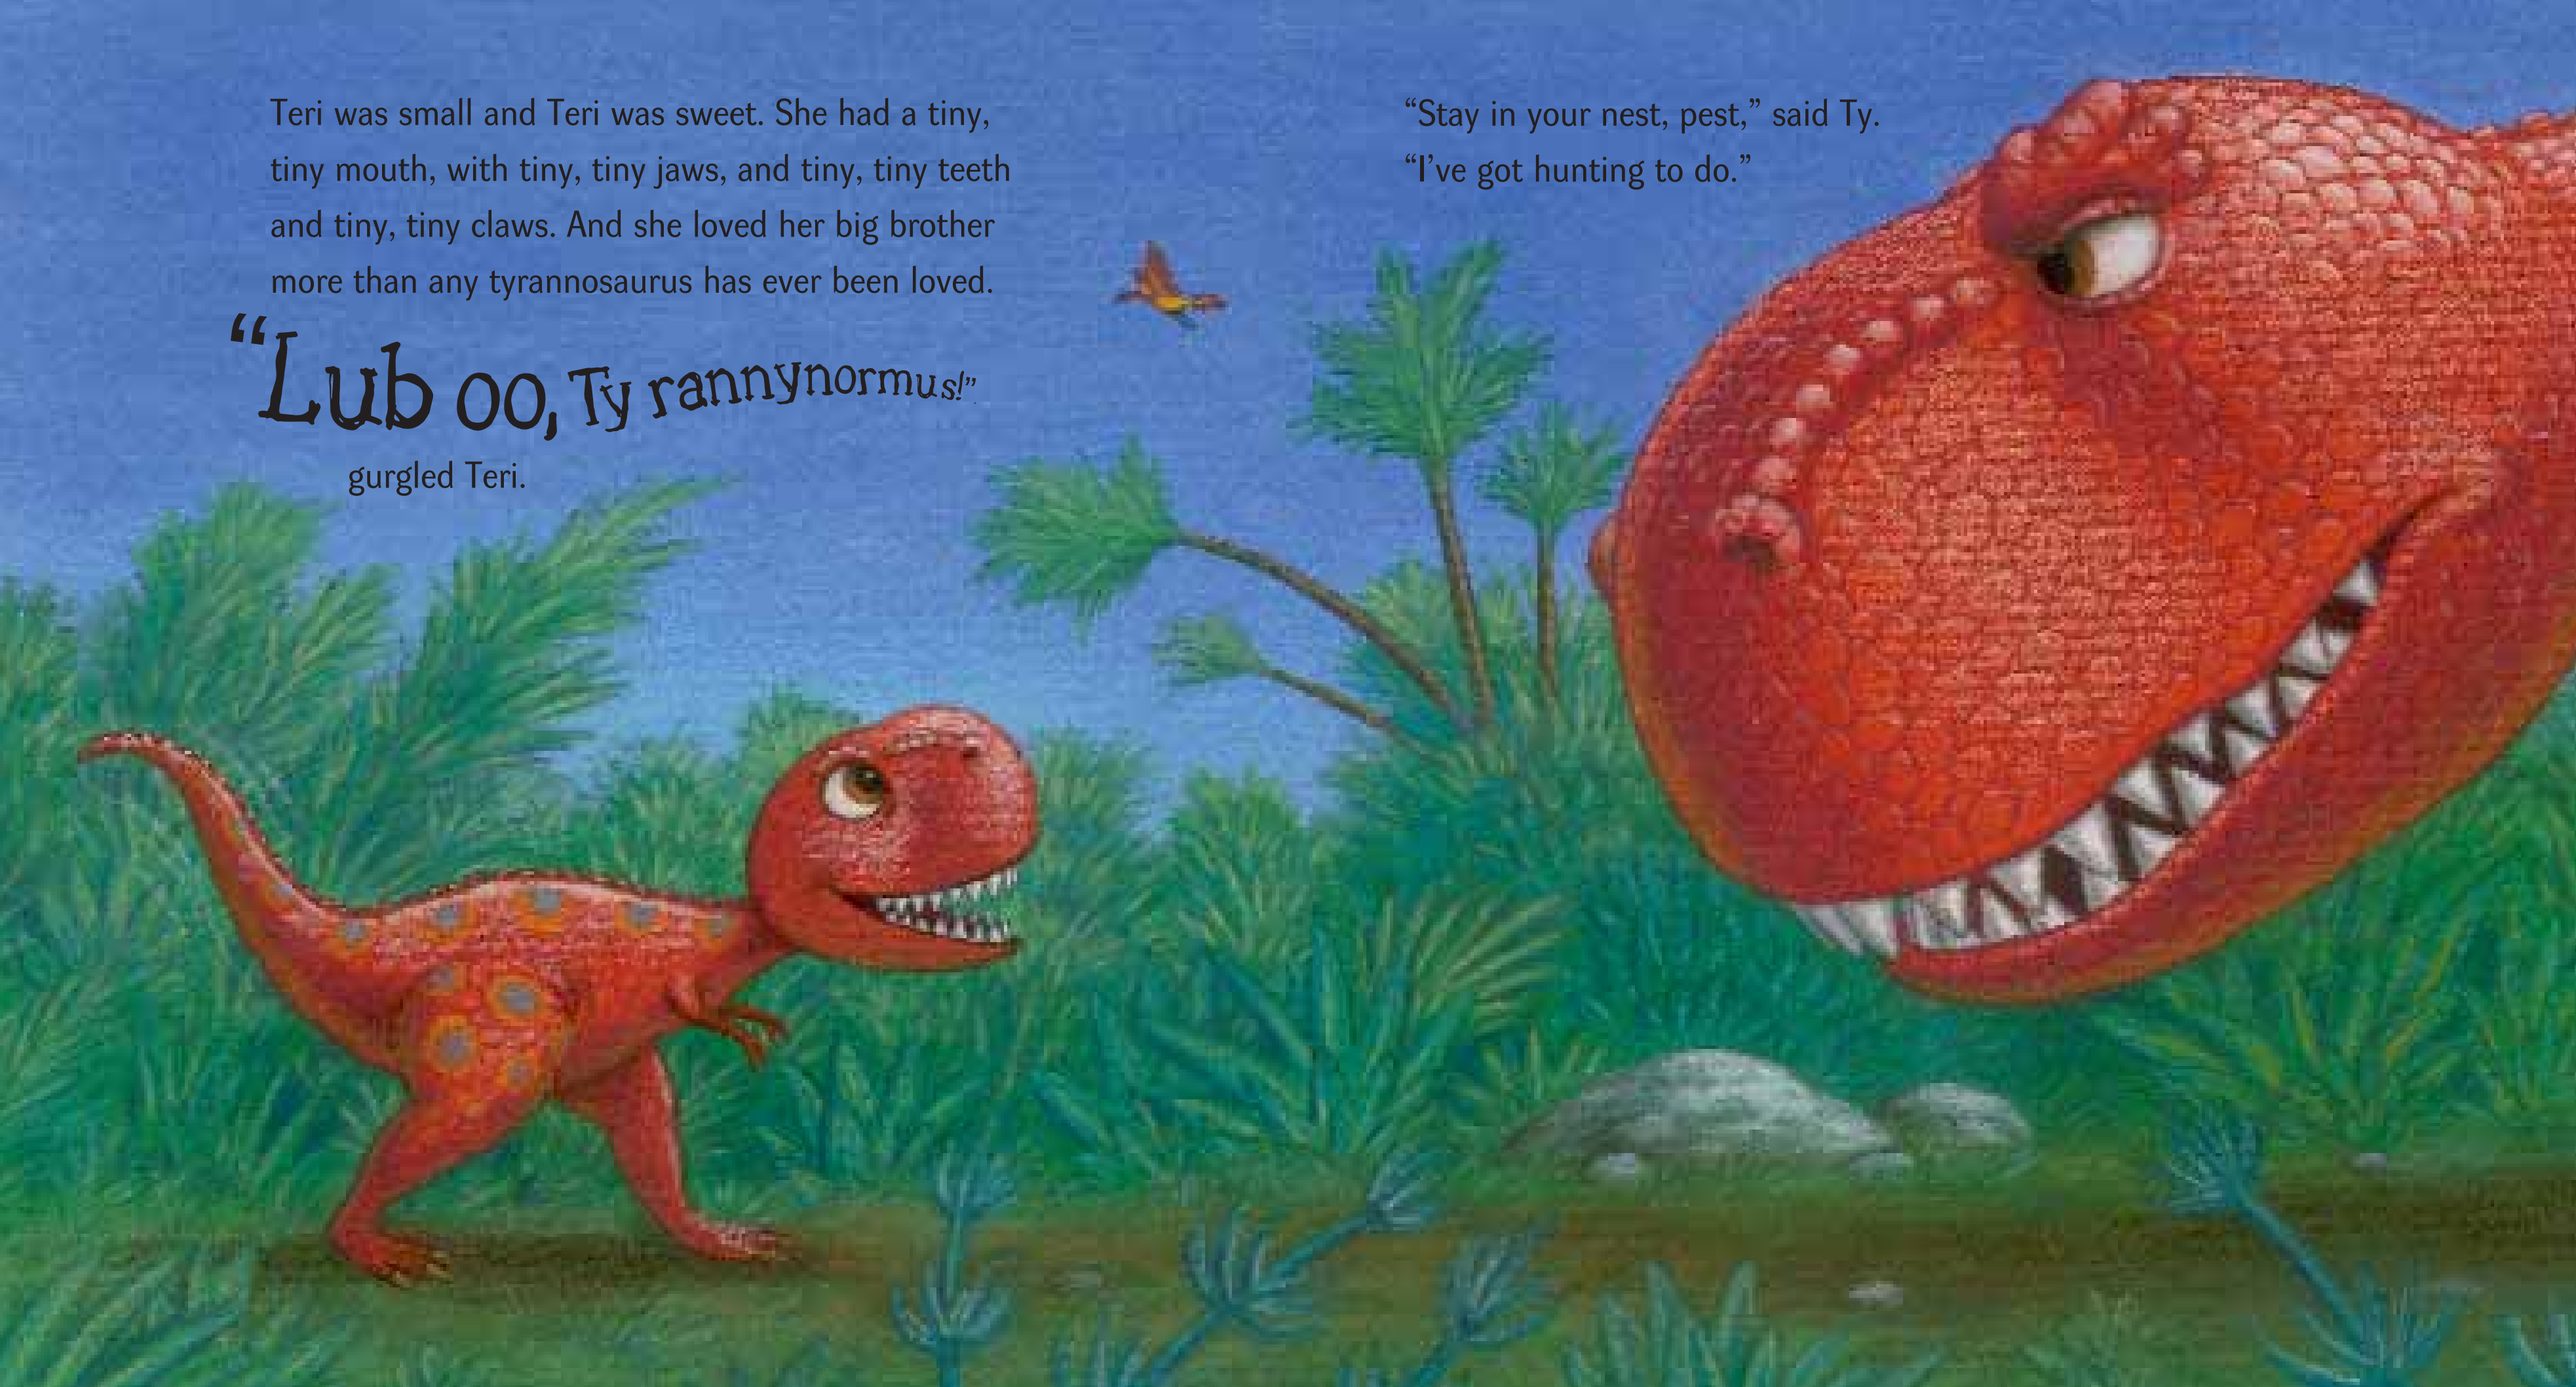

Ty was big, and Ty was mean. He had a big, big mouth, with big, big jaws, and big, big teeth and big, big, claws.

"Yeah! That's me," said Ty tyrannosaurus.

His roar echoed around the swamp, so that the other dinosaurs trembled in their tummies.

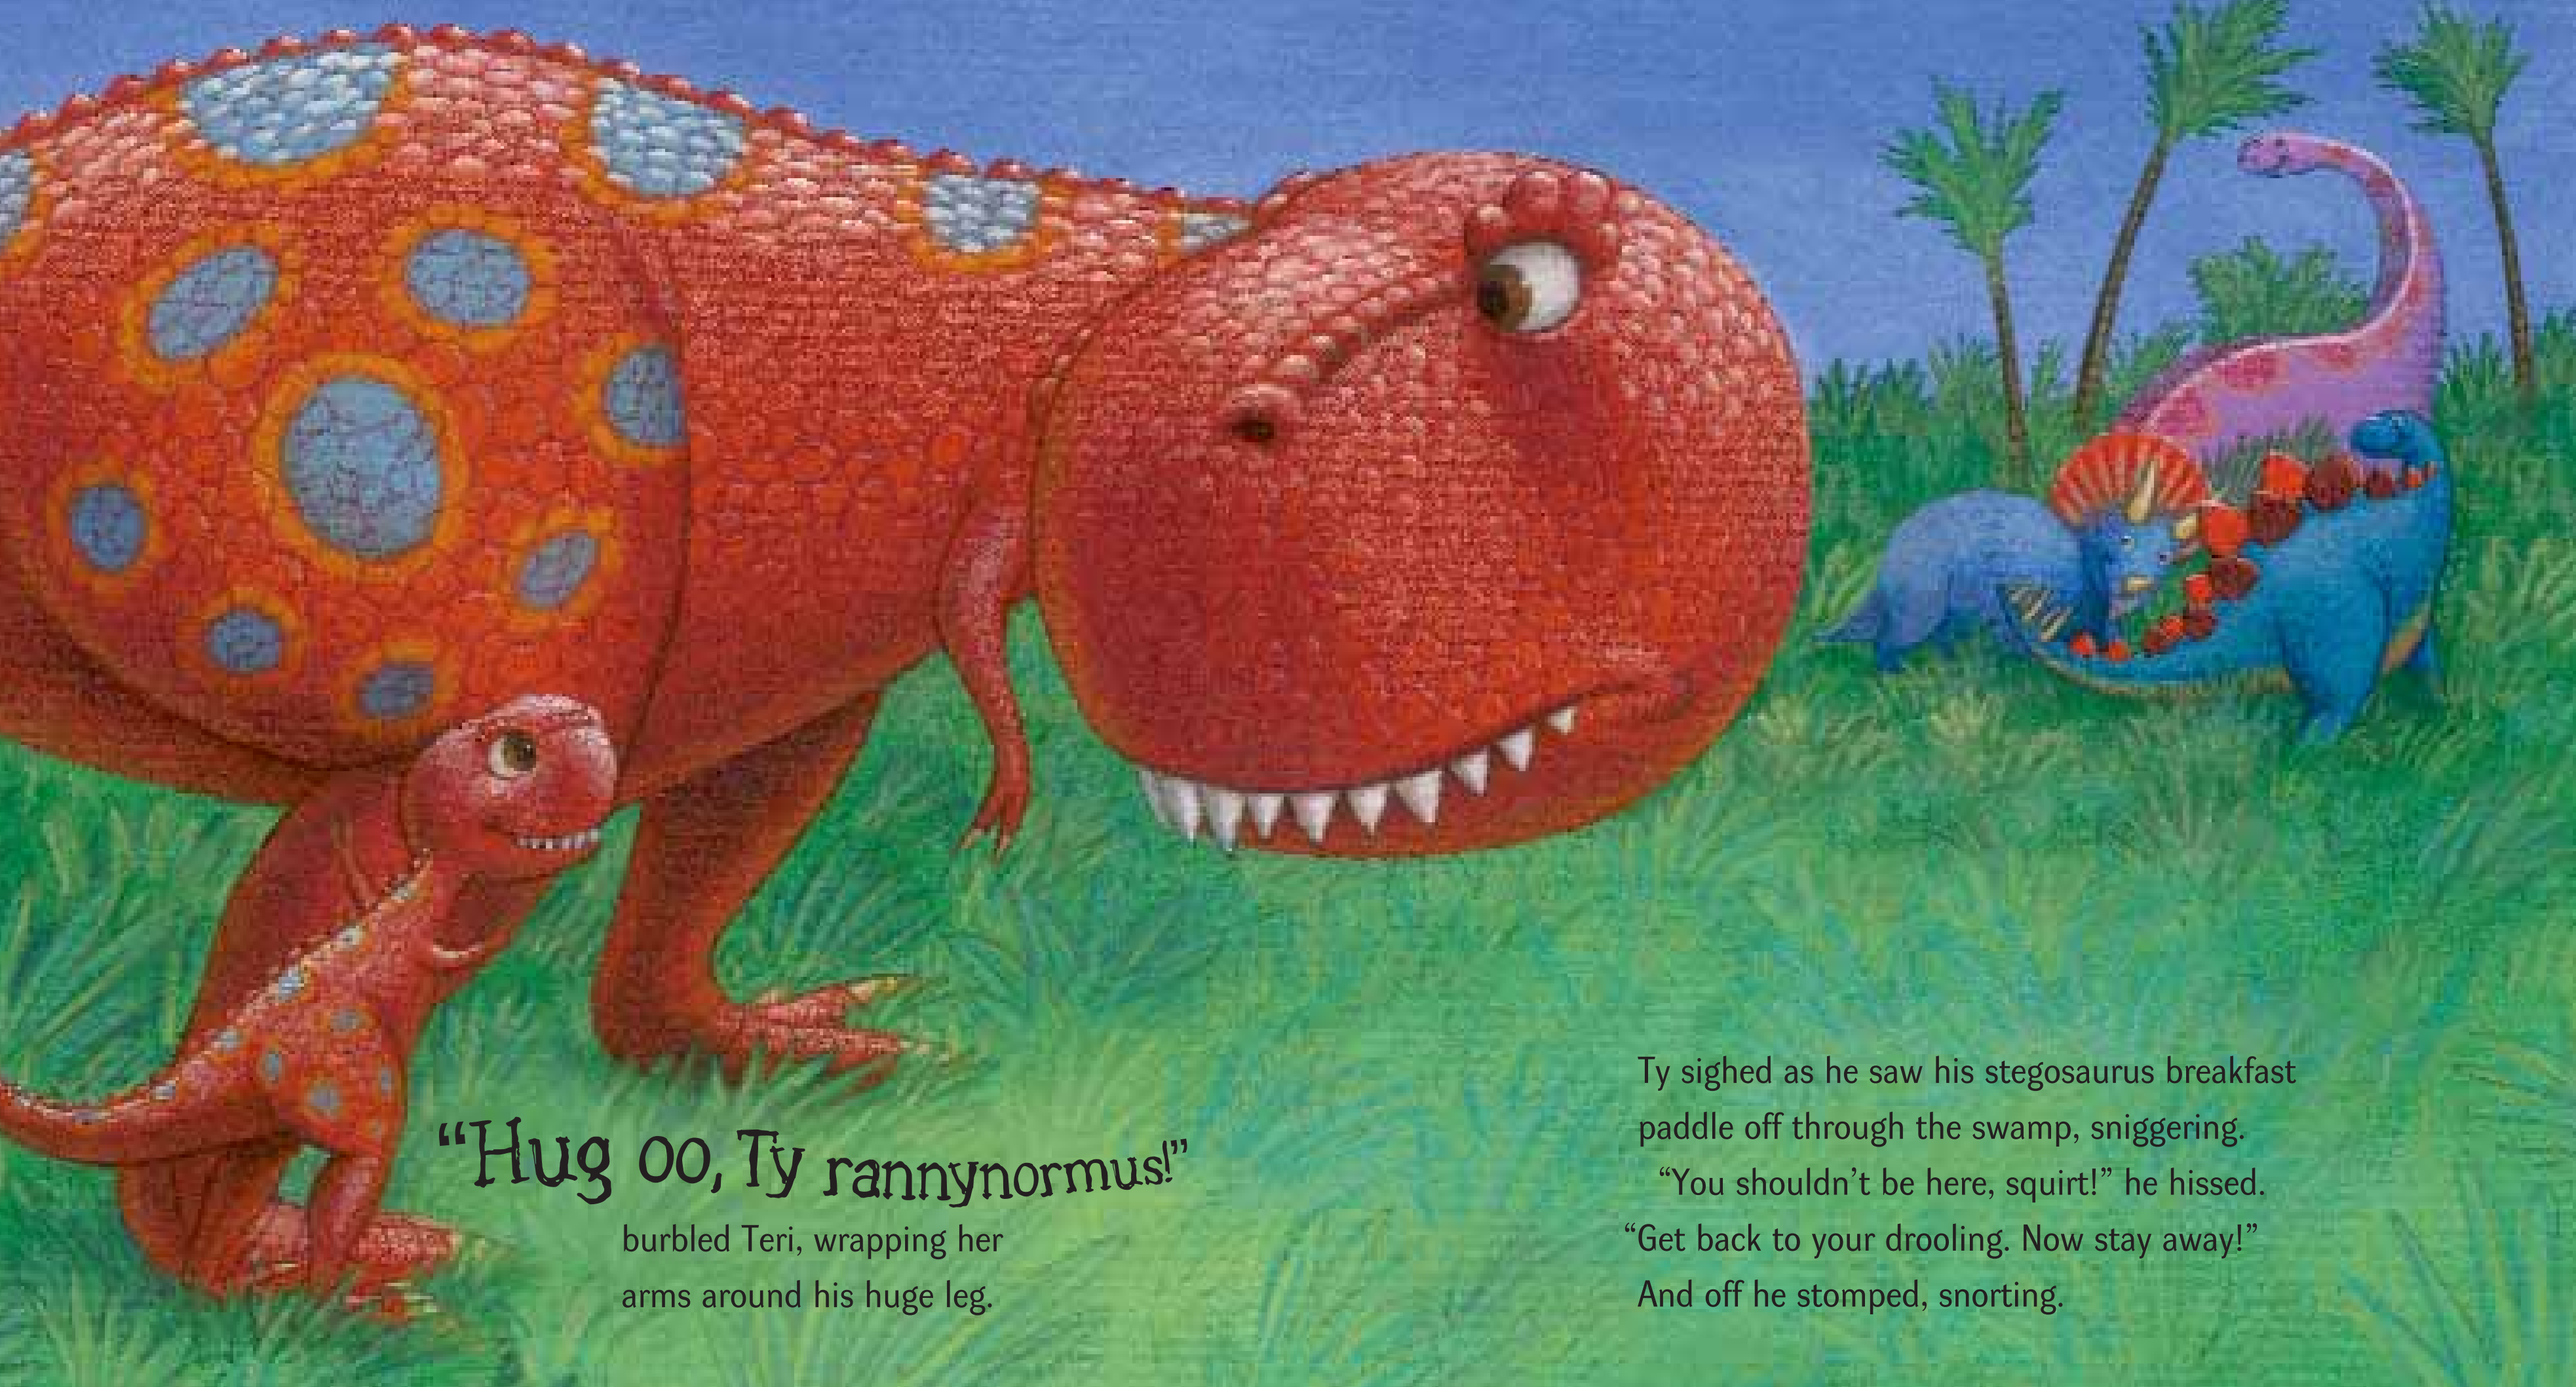

Teri was small and Teri was sweet. She had a tiny, tiny mouth, with tiny, tiny jaws, and tiny, tiny teeth and tiny, tiny claws. And she loved her big brother more than any tyrannosaurus has ever been loved.

"Lub oo, Ty rannynormus!"

gurgled Teri.

"Stay in your nest, pest," said Ty. "I've got hunting to do."

Ty stomped through the swamp.
The ground sploshed and quaked and quivered, and the dinosaurs heard,
and shook and shivered.
"I'M HUNGRY!" roared Ty.
"I'M BIGGEST, I'M BADDEST,
I'M READY TO EAT.
I NEED SOME FRESH
STEGOSAURUS MEAT!"
He opened his big, big mouth and . . .

"Hug oo, Ty rannynormus!"
burbled Teri, wrapping her arms around his huge leg.

Ty sighed as he saw his stegosaurus breakfast paddle off through the swamp, sniggering.
"You shouldn't be here, squirt!" he hissed.
"Get back to your drooling. Now stay away!"
And off he stomped, snorting.
