CULINARY INVADERS:

THE GOOD FOOD GUIDE (WHO TO EAT AND WHEN)

Not all alien invaders want to take over the world, some just want a quick takeaway. If you don't want to become a convenient snack for a passing alien, you'll need to be able to recommend somewhere and something else more tempting. The following recommendations from The Good Food Guide (Who To Eat and When) might just help . . .

THE PUTRIKON OF SLOP

Respected food critic, writer for Gulp magazine and author of The Good Food Guide (Who To Eat and When), the Putrikon of Slop not only reviews the restaurants in her influential guide but also eats the customers and staff when she can catch them.

Gulp magazine's coveted Skull Rating for restaurants with the tastiest customers

COLIN SAYS

Laser cutlery is excellent for cutting through bone and gristle but extremely hard to wash up.

CRUD BISTRO AND CESS PIT

This pleasant little eatery has pleasingly smelly toilets and filthy kitchens, and is a popular haunt of space flies, galactic beetles and the giant flightless vomit bug. Take a corner table and you can enjoy one of the most revolting culinary sights in the universe. Regurgitating corrosive bile onto its food then sucking up the contents up to twenty three times, the vomit bug really likes to play with its food.

VESUVIOS' EARTHQUAKE AND VOLCANO BAR

For the ultimate dining experience for non-carbon-based life forms, try the molten magma at Vesuvios'. Giant Space Worm gastric cocktails with cement chasers will add a rumble or two to the evening but some may find this volcano bar just too hot to handle.

OUCH! LIVE SUSHI RESTAURANT

Alien predators from all over the universe are flocking to this elegant restaurant with its stunning array of live sushi. Why slum it on a space freighter when lunch can be this much fun? Highly recommended. Vegetarian option available if freshly caught.

THE CELEBRITY CHEF

BAR AND GRILL (No skulls)

Sadly this upmarket restaurant fails to live up to the hype. Although the menu contains plenty of celebrity chefs, many freshly caught and cooked by Cosmo Tentacles – the most famous cook in the universe, most are disappointingly tasteless. Take my advice and eat the head waiter instead.
