"Did you do this on my head?"
he asked the hare.

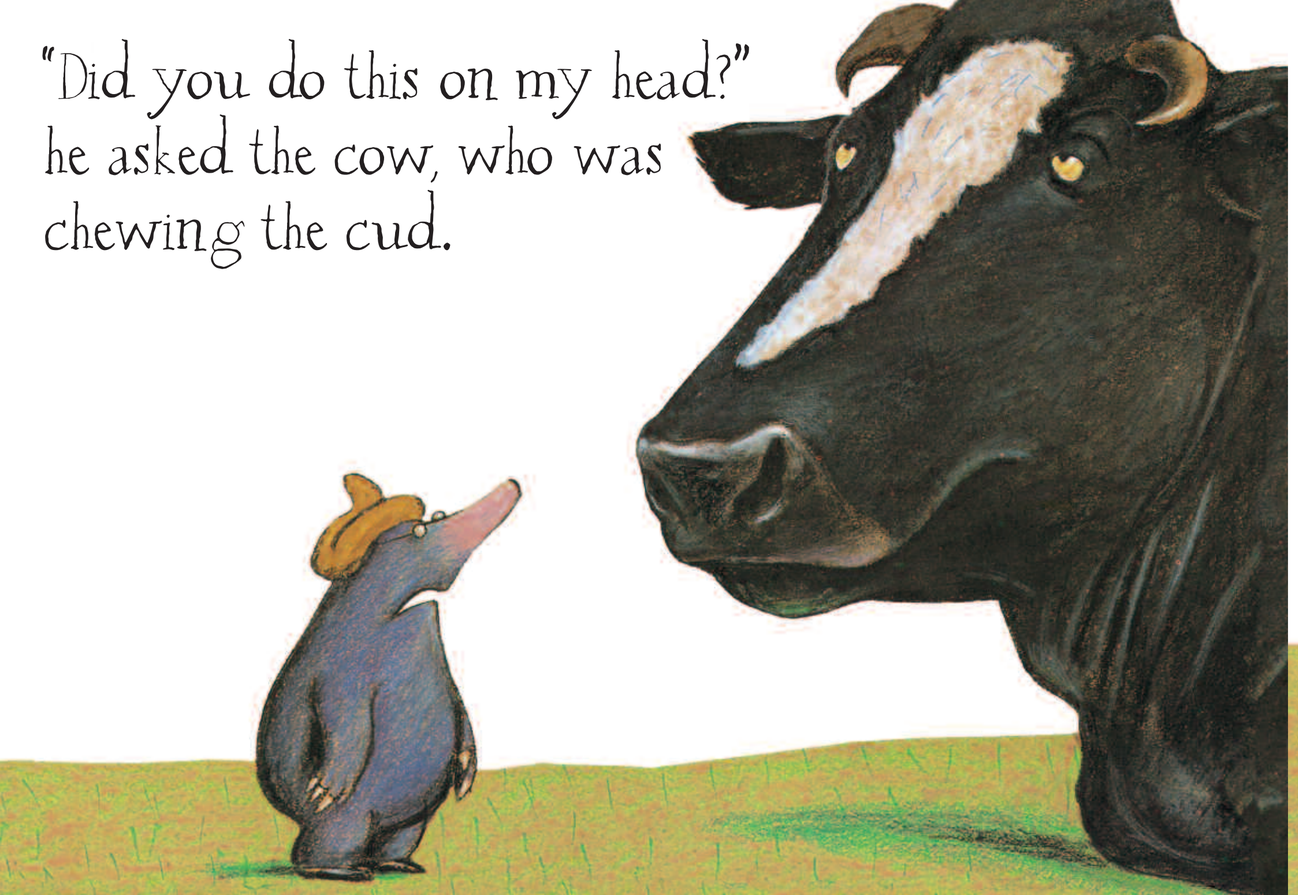

"Me? No how could I?
I do it like this!"
answered the hare.

(And rat-a-tat tat—fifteen little round beans shot past the mole's ears. He saved himself with a daring leap.)

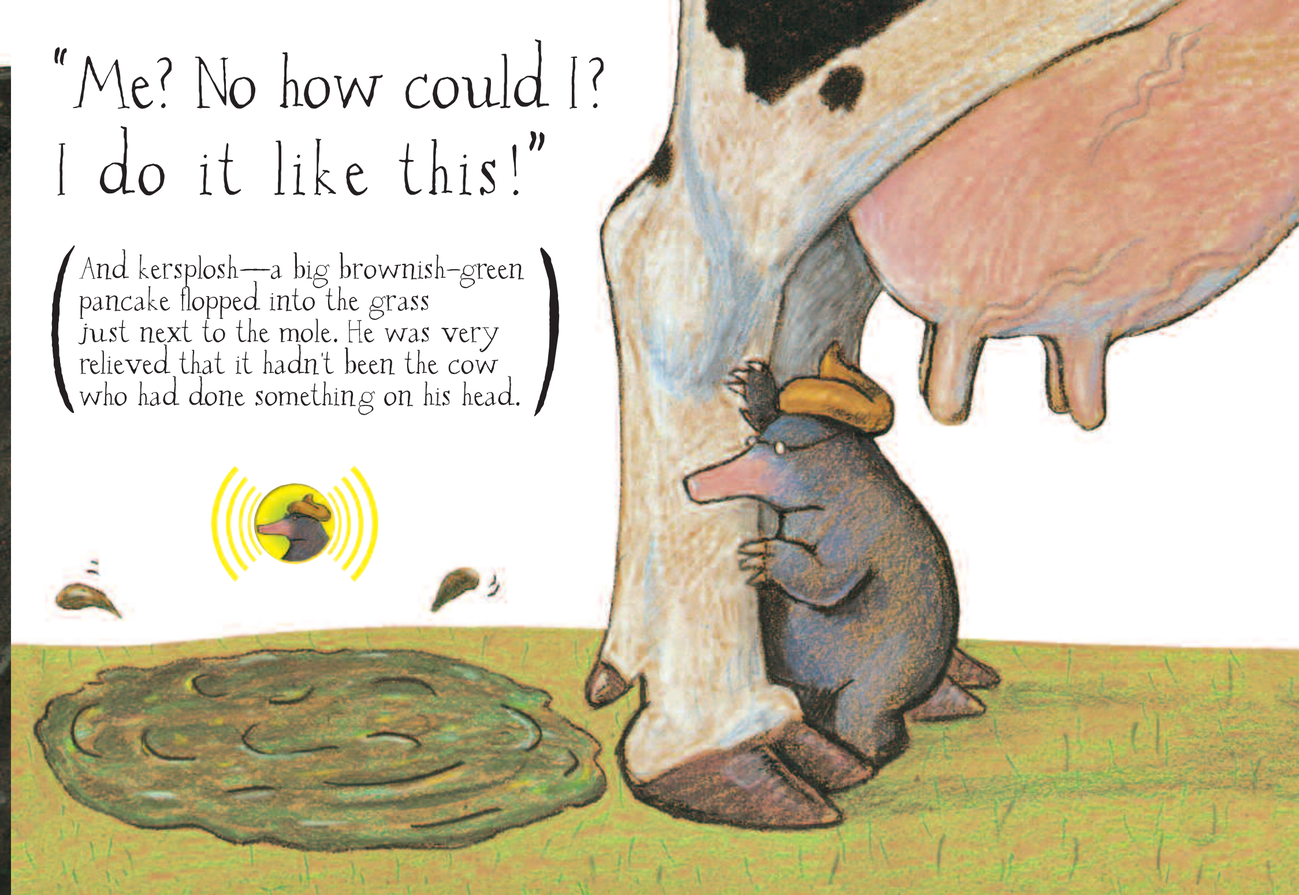

"Did you do this on my head?"
he asked the cow, who was chewing the cud.

"Me? No how could I?
I do it like this!"

(And kersplosh—a big brownish-green pancake flopped into the grass just next to the mole. He was very relieved that it hadn't been the cow who had done something on his head.)

"Did you do this on my head?"
he asked the pig.

"Me? No how could I?
I do it like this!"
replied the pig.

(And plop, splat—a little soft brown pile fell to the grass. The mole held his nose.)
