When the lights went out at the Toy Museum
and the doors were locked,
all the toys woke up.
They bounced down off the shelves,
giddy and laughing
and squeaking with delight.

But Bunting, the old toy cat,
just rolled his eyes and sighed.
He brushed his whiskers,
he stretched,
and slowly, slowly,
he got down from the shelf...

"Please assemble for inspection,"
said Bunting, just as he did every night.

He called the register,
and then he counted all the toys ...
twice ... just to be sure no one was missing.
