

Helping your children choose books they will love

Lovereading4kids.co.uk is a book website created for parents and children to make choosing books easy and fun

Opening extract from
If You Could See
Laughter

Written by
Mandy Coe

Published by Salt Publishing

All Text is Copyright © of the Author and/or Illustrator

Please print off and read at your leisure.

MANDY COE
If You Could See Laughter

MANDY COE is an award-winning poet and artist. She has published six books including three collections of poetry for adults and one for children. Her work has been featured on BBC television and radio and she reads at literature events across the UK.

As a freelance writer, Mandy works with community groups and inner-city schools. Her guide to the work of writers in schools Our thoughts are bees (co-written with Jean Sprackland) was described by Andrew Motion as 'inspiring, enlightening and far-reaching'.

Mandy Coe's first collection Pinning the Tail on the Donkey was shortlisted for the Aldeburgh First Collection Prize. Her poetry for children is anthologised by Macmillan, Oxford University Press and Bloomsbury. Mandy is a Hawthornden Fellow.

Also by Mandy Coe

POETRY FOR ADULTS

Pinning the Tail on the Donkey (Spike 2000)

The Weight of Cows (Shoestring Press 2004)

Clay (Shoestring Press 2009)

NON-FICTION

Our thoughts are bees: Writers Working with Schools (Wordplay Press 2005)

GRAPHIC NOVEL

Red Shoes (Good Stuff Press 1997)

MANDY
COE

If You Could See Laughter

Illustrated by Mandy Coe

CHILDREN'S POETRY LIBRARY
No. 6

S
SALT
LONDON

PUBLISHED BY SALT PUBLISHING
Dutch House, 307–308 High Holborn,
London WC1V 7LL United Kingdom

All rights reserved

© Mandy Coe, 2010
Illustrations © Mandy Coe

The right of Mandy Coe to be identified as the editor of this work has been asserted by her in accordance with Section 77 of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

This book is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Salt Publishing.

First published 2010

Printed in the UK by the MPG Books Group

Typeset in Oneleight 11/14

This book is sold subject to the conditions that it shall not, by way of trade or otherwise, be lent, re-sold, hired out, or otherwise circulated without the publisher's prior consent in any form of binding or cover other than that in which it is published and without a similar condition including this condition being imposed on the subsequent purchaser.

ISBN 978 1 84471 487 2 paperback

1 3 5 7 9 8 6 4 2

For Frank and Doris Childs who made our childhood shine ...

... and for all the children and teachers who share their poems with me.

*'Day by day I float my paper boats one by one down the running stream.
In big black letters I write my name on them and the name of the village where I live.'*
—RABINDRANATH TAGORE

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	xi
Advice for . . .	i
Seashell	2
Felt Funny All Day	3
'Flowers go to school underground'	5
Moorhen	6
Raw	7
Recipe for Good News	8
If You Could See Laughter	9
Too Young to Know	10
One Pair a Year	11
Thank You	12
Frog	14
Row Flow Blow	15
Sensing Mother	16
Sun Loves Moon	18
What Lives Down the Playground Drain	20
The Sunshine of Susan Browne	21
The Head's First Name	22
When Ms Smith Slammed the Classroom Door	23
Summer Song	24
Fizz	25
Bed of Glass	26
Opposites	27
The Gift	28

Assembly	29
Schoolday's End	30
Elemental Rules	31
Offended Cat	33
Queen of the Hive	34
The Strawberry-Yoghurt Smell of Words	35
Swimming on Christmas Day	36
Lighthouse	38
Being the Baddie	39
Bottling it Up	41
From the Mouths of Babes	42
Busy Feet	43
In My Name (MANDY)	44
Marsh-Sprite	45
Soft as the Blanket	46
Catch Words	48
Upon Once	49
Buttercup	51
Questions for a Dad	52
My Ma	53
Being Human	54
Wish	56
The Girl Who Discovered Fire	57
Me & You	59
Cloud That Fell	61
Music's Prayer	62

The Cancan	63
Extinct	64
Smile	65
Lost It, Found It	66
Dream Feast	67
Night Night	68

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Thanks to the editors of the following anthologies in which these poems first appeared: 'Assembly' in The Works 6, Macmillan; 'Bottling it Up' in Here Come the Heebie Jeebies, Hodder Wayland; 'Busy Feet' in The Oxford Reading Tree, Oxford University Press; 'Can-can' in Hot Heads, Warm Hearts, Cold Streets, Stanley Thornes; 'Catch Words' in Playing With Words, Pelican; 'How the Light', 'Me & You', 'Thank You', 'The Head's First Name', 'The Sunshine of Susan Browne' and 'When Ms Smith' in Read Me At School, Macmillan; 'Marsh Sprite' and 'Wish' in Fairy Poems, Macmillan; 'Schoolday's End' in Spooky Schools, Macmillan; 'Sensing Mother' in Sensational, Bloomsbury; 'The Girl Who Lit the First Fire' in Wicked, Bloomsbury; 'Soft as the Blanket' in Michael Rosen's A-Z: The Best Children's Poetry from Agard to Zephaniah, Puffin.

'The Cloud That Fell' was commissioned by Can I have a Word, the Barbican.

If You Could See Laughter

ADVICE FOR . . .

PONIES

let the pictures flow
what do you see?
taste every sound
 neat?
 tidy?
 no
look at apples
without saying apple
be brave
thoughts can interrupt thinking run fast learn to stand still

POETS

dream of a land without fences never show anyone how high you can really jump accept kindness softly between the stars and each sweet blade of grass lie secrets that sound like grasshoppers let frost make your breath white know that you are the creator of all rhythms found between stillness
and the rare moments you run so fast you no longer touch the ground

MANDY COE

SEASHELL

Have you seen it? A pink-tinted coil of air . . . about so big?

At one end can be heard the open roar of sea, the other narrows to silence and infinity.
In between is nothing,

shaped like a ringlet or honeysuckle twine, and (before the orange grip of oyster-catcher's beak)
it was the exact shape of me.

Have you seen that coil of air where my soft self should be?

If You Could See Laughter

FELT FUNNY ALL DAY

There was a man who left his house in such a rush he shut the front door on his shadow.

The shadow knocked, the shadow called though its knuckles made no noise and its voice stirred no air.

The man walked for a while but his footsteps sounded loud.
He sat on a bench

but the bench felt hard.
He read his newspaper,
but the words seemed to dance.

The man scratched his head wondering what he had forgotten.

At home the shadow
zigzagged itself on the stairs, flattened itself against the window.

MANDY COE

In the end it hung itself on the hat-stand, neat as an ironed shirt. I've felt funny all day,
said the man as he let himself in.

He hung up his hat, tapped his chest with his fist and burped:
must have been indigestion.

If You Could See Laughter

‘FLOWERS GO TO SCHOOL UNDERGROUND’

RABINDRANATH TAGORE

Flowers beneath snow,
inside the earth,
within the seed.

Flowers in honeycomb,
girls’ names,
the scented foam of soap.

Flowers in the thread,
a swift needle’s tip,
the dancing swirl of skirt.

Flowers in the paint,
the bristles of the brush,
hummingbird dreams.

Flowers in fireworks,
deep in flowerpots, flowers
humming to the bees.

MANDY COE

MOORHEN

She is the clown of all waterfowl, stubby and black,
plastic yellow feet, bright red nose.
The eggs — her treasures — are carefully raised from dog-brown water on a flimsy throne of twigs.

Her partner honks a warning at reeds, rats, ripples, sky.
Through park railings
a toddler drops a fistful of white bread.

The eggs are alive with tiny vibrations.
Like nightfall, black feathers settle and still them.

If You Could See Laughter

RAW

We always tiptoe up to rhubarb and braving the prick of leaves, kneel in muck
bending the angled stem until the glassy snap.

Something draws us to it,
the sly creak of its shine,
the rawness
that strips spit, making our teeth feel coated and sharp.

We push out tongues in gargoyle astonishment, let half-chewed dollops drop between our feet. How could the sweet pink of rhubarb and custard come from this?

Behind splintered sheds
where old men tip rumbling wheelbarrows, we prepare to bite into onion.

MANDY COE

RECIPE FOR GOOD NEWS

I want to make news
the way a baker bakes a cake,
because the news I'd bake won't make grandma's smile turn upside-down
while she sighs at the radio:
What's the world coming to?

I want to make news
the way a baker bakes a cake,
because the news I'd bake won't make mum bang shirts with the iron while shouting at the telly:
Tell the truth for once why don't you!

I want to make news
the way a baker bakes a cake,
because the news I'd make will have everyone cheering for dark red cherries and chocolate icing.

My news will be so good we'll gather round to share it, lick the crumbs off our fingers.

If You Could See Laughter

IF YOU COULD SEE LAUGHTER

Hey, it is blue! No, surely red — the colour of each breath pumped out by the joy of running or the jumpstart of a joke.

Tickle-breath is long and spiral.
Pink
I think.

If you could see laughter
it would look like balloons,
the sort magicians knot in squeaky twists.
Laugh a giraffe, guffaw a poodle.

A belly-laugh creates balloons that float,
at the pantomime, the air of the theatre
jostles with colour.
See this baby reaching for your smile?
A yellow hiccup of laughter pops out, bobs above us for days.

We could rise off the ground with laughter,
tie strings on it and sail around the world.

MANDY COE

TOO YOUNG TO KNOW

In town the shutters stay closed.
We sleep with our clothes on.
The hall is full of bags.
Everyone goes quiet
when an aeroplane passes.

Uncle's shop is empty.
No warm smells of seedcake,
no queuing women to ruffle my hair.

From my bed I hear my family talking,
but when I dare to ask, when I dare to touch my mother's hand and ask, she says I am too young to understand.

Even the dog senses something,
creeping under the table, tail held low.
I hug his neck and whisper into his soft ear,
What is to happen? He licks my cheek.

If You Could See Laughter

ONE PAIR A YEAR

And as they wear out you tie string around the toes
as if to silence a flapping mouth.
Line them with paper: headlines, local news.

You try to walk even, walk light.
Hammering nails into heels
you click and clack.
Every day you slip them off to save them,
side by side on the porch step,
in the shadow of a chair.
All dancing is done with bare feet.

Stones bruise, jute cuts,
it hurts you — or wears out the shoes.
Your decision, each journey,
each time you rise from chair or bed.
You walk to work, shoes bumping your chest,
the laces biting the back of your neck.

MANDY COE

THANK YOU

Danke, merci, gracias
for the heat of the sun,
the kindness of teaching,
the smell of fresh bread.

Diolch, nkosi, shur-nur-ah-gah-lem
for the sound of sand,
children singing,
the book and the pen.

Dhannyabad, blagodaria, hvala for the blue of small flowers,
the bobbing seal's head,
the taste of clean water.

Shukran gazillan, yakoke, nandi for the stripe of the zebra,
the song of the chaffinch,
the gentleness of snails.

Mh goi, abarka, mille grazie
for the length of time,
the loveliness of eyelashes,
the arc of the ball.

If You Could See Laughter

Dziekuje, bhala hove, shakkran for the excitement of falling,
the stillness of night,
my heart beating, thank you.

MANDY COE

FROG

The frog has neatly folded legs.
Jaw of bulldog,
pond-skinned, up-eyed. This frog has a double chin that throbs:
frog, he sings, frog.

Now he fans his toes and leaps into a ring of ripples.
He grew himself, this frog,
from a black dot
in a see-through blob.

He measures time
in tongue-lengths and hops,
this damsel fly: gone!
Only a blink-of-an-eye gulp revealing what occurs between verses of his song.

If You Could See Laughter

ROW FLOW BLOW

For Matt Simpson

an old man in a boat asked me
asked me how to go
I know, I said, I know
row, you've got to row
row, flow, blow
row, flow, blow

the tides of the sea they asked me
asked me how to go
I know, I said, I know
flow, you've got to flow
row, flow, blow
row, flow, blow

The wind behind the sails asked me
asked me how to go
I know, I said, I know
blow, you've got to blow
row, flow, blow
row, flow, blow

MANDY COE

SENSING MOTHER

Dad keeps Mum's favourite dress deep in the bottom of the ottoman.
Sometimes, when he is at work
I stand listening to the tick of the clock then go upstairs.

And propping up the squeaky wooden lid,
I dig through layers of rough, winter blankets
feeling for that touch of silk.
The blue whisper of it, cool against my cheek.

Other times, the school-test times,
and dad-gets-home-too-late to-say-goodnight times —
I wrap the arms of the dress around me, breathing in a smell, faint as dried flowers.

I remember how she twirled around — like a swirl of sky.

If You Could See Laughter

When I am old enough I will wear it.
Pulling up the white zip,
I'll laugh and spin,
calling out to my daughter:
How do I look?

MANDY COE

SUN LOVES MOON

Monday, small ads:

Hey Moonie-La, meet me at dawn S x

Tuesday, text:

c u l8r :-) ?

Wednesday, diary extract:

I will never EVER call her again.

Thursday, voicemail:

Hi M, it's me. Did you get the flowers?
Sorry about the chocolates,
I put them in my pocket and they got . . . runny.
Listen — is there any chance of us meeting?
Please, please call me.

Friday, graffiti:

Sun ♥ Moon

If You Could See Laughter

Saturday, singing telegram:

Greetings Miss, I love your face.

Please stop this eternal chase.

Will you be mine and let me shine?

My palest, roundest, Valentine.

Sunday, invitation:

Engagement party! Bring a friend. RSVP