Next we go to Buckingham Palace,
where the Queen of England lives.

Marv says,
"When the flag is flying that means the Queen is in."

"I wonder which window
is the Queen's bedroom,"
says Lola.

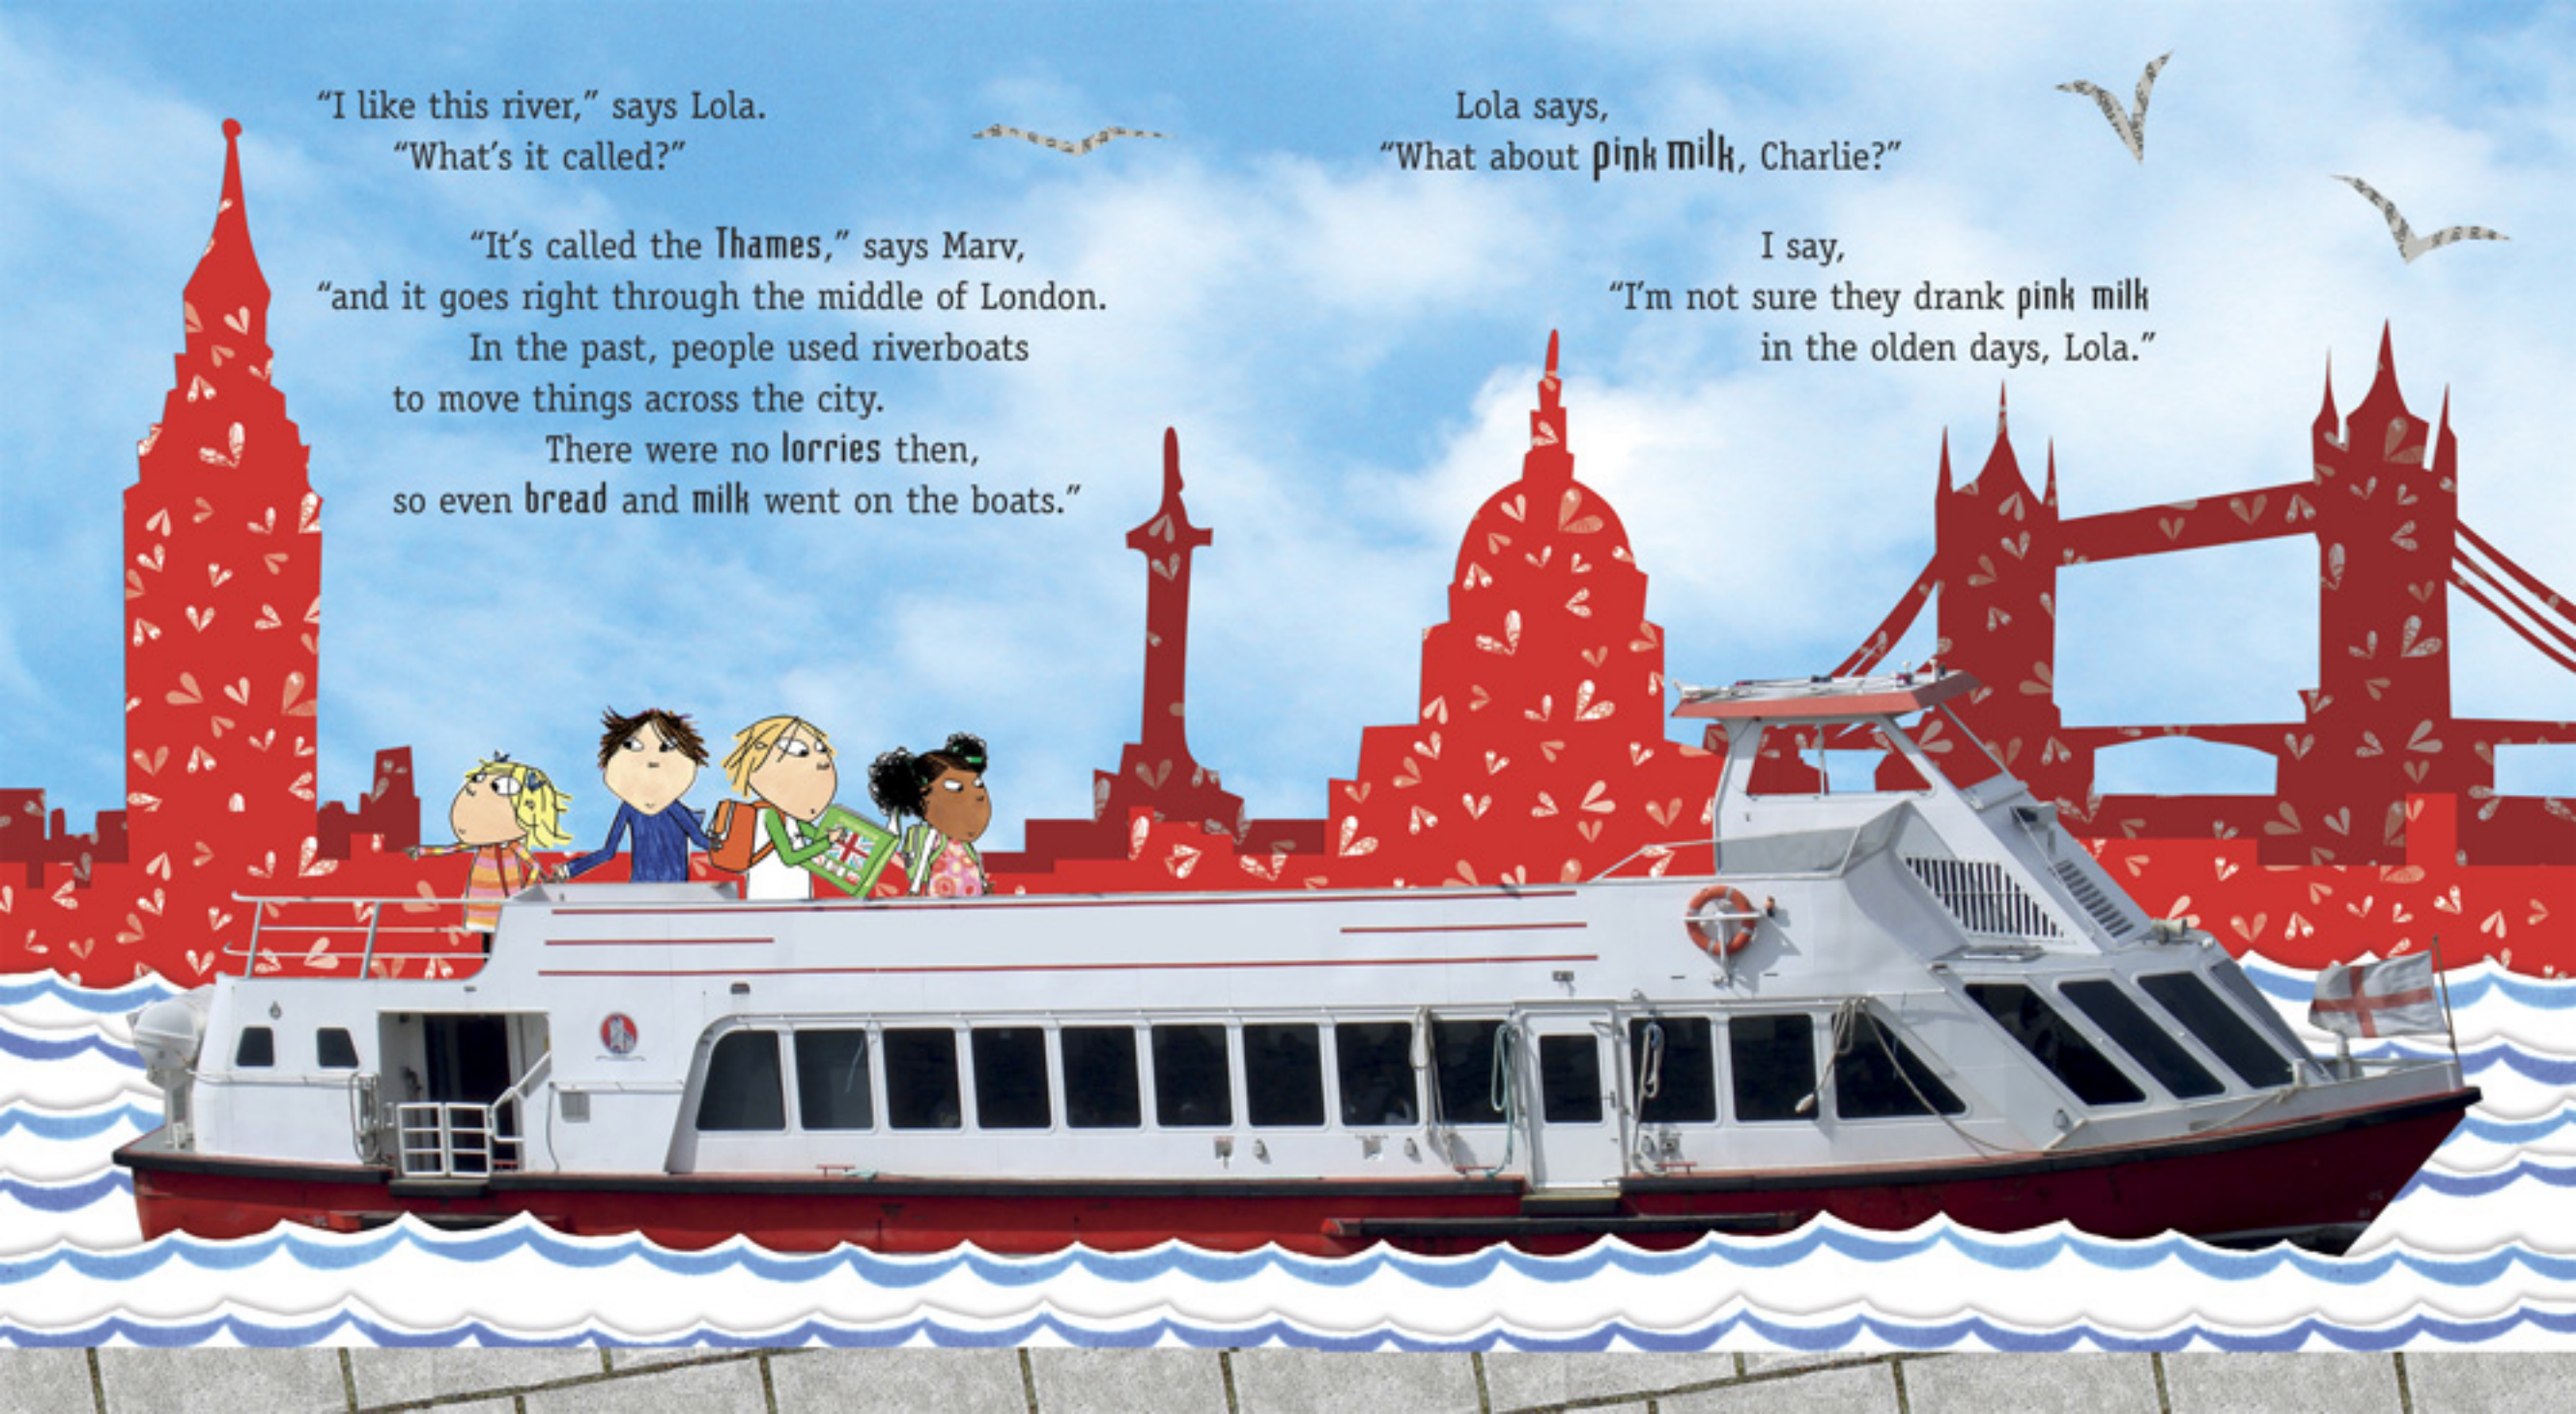

"I'm not sure, Lola.
The guidebook says that there are 52 bedrooms."

Lola says,
"Does she keep her crowns
and her jewellery
in her bedroom?"

"No, the Queen's most precious jewels are kept in the Tower of London.

Mrs Hanson says
we're going to have a look at them next."

"I like this river," says Lola.
"What's it called?"
"It's called the Thames," says Marv,
"and it goes right through the middle of London.
In the past, people used riverboats
to move things across the city.
There were no lorries then,
so even bread and milk went on the boats."
Lola says,
"What about pink milk, Charlie?"
I say,
"I'm not sure they drank pink milk
in the olden days, Lola."
