

ten which was Topsy and which was Tim.
They had pulled their sacks up over their heads.

A vibrant, cartoon-style illustration of a community event. In the foreground, four children are participating in a sack race. They are wearing blue hats and are inside large brown sacks. One child on the left is falling backward, another in the center is crawling forward, and one on the right is standing upright. A fourth child is partially visible at the bottom, also crawling. In the background, a group of diverse adults and children are watching from a wooden bench. Some are waving. To the left, a white tent is set up with a table holding various drinks. A small bee is flying near the tent. The scene is set on a green grassy field.

Topsy and Tim were twins. They were exactly the same size. They ran easily while the others struggled. “We’re going to win!” shouted Topsy and Tim. And so they did.

Mr Taylor presented golden medals to all the winners of the races. He gave Topsy and Tim each a medal, because they had won the three-legged race together.

