Stuart would eat bugs, with his fork

and with his knife,

Much to the disgust of Harriet, his wife.

He'd munch them, and crunch them,

legs and all.

While they'd wriggle and squirm and scurry and crawl.

Fat hairy spiders, with poisonous fangs.

Centipede sandwiches,

wasp flavored meringues.

Fried, roasted or raw,

Stuart doesn't mind

As long as the bugs are the

wriggling kind!

It's the wriggly ones that taste the best you see,

To Stuart that is, not to you or me.

He'd munch them in handfuls

and bite off their legs,

He would chew off their antenna,

and nibble their heads.
